Diversified and affordable housing needed

By Bill Rea

Addressing Caledon's housing needs is not going to be easy.

That was one of the apparent developments that came out of last Wednesday's meeting in Bolton regarding the Housing Study that's been commissioned by the Town. The study is being conducted by SHS Consulting.

There were about 30 people on hand for the meeting, and they were asked to respond to various questions about the housing system that's in place, with comments being written on Post-it Notes.

When asked what's working well in Caledon's housing system, responses included comments on restrictions on development to maintain farmland, statements that Peel Living's seniors' buildings are working well, people are looking forward to the coming developments in Mayfield West, the concept of a community of communities, the fact that detached family home are prevalent in town and restrictions on the height on buildings.

In terms of what people would do to change or improve Caledon's housing system, responses included requiring developers to build a range of housing options, increase the number of rental units, pushing back on higher densities, increase high-density seniors' housing, more affordable options for seniors, calls to change Caledon's "exclusive nature." the need for housing for people with intellectual disabilities, the need for transit and the need for more seniors' housing in Caledon East, Palgrave and Caledon village.

Another question dealt with what an improved housing system in Caledon would look like, and the responses included maintaining medium to low-density, more modest housing options, having a more balanced community, seniors being able to live close to services, more rental housing, walkability (especially for seniors), multi-income communities and affordable supportive housing.

The question of what it would take to implement changes and the barriers to be overcome, the responses included having market rent units at Peel Living buildings, money to support assisted living, overcoming resistance from developers, more direction from government, the cost of servicing new development, streamlining the approval process, more flexible zoning bylaws and getting through red tape.

Marisa Williams, senior policy planner with the Town, said the study is a roughly nine-month process, which she said should be done by mid-September. She added this is the first time the Town has studied all types of housing and looked all over the municipality. She said the aim is to create a base line to observe changes in the housing market over time.

Williams said the data collection has been completed, and they were now seeking public input.

Christine Pacini of SHS Consulting said the study is also being conducted as part of the review of the Town's Official Plan, creating baseline data that will be the basis of specific priorities and policies.

She also said there are two phases to the study. The first involved the collection of the data, and the other deals with looking at needs, existing plans and legislation, and to make recommendations to the Town.

Growing population and increased housing costs are causing complications

Data so far has been obtained from the Town and Peel Region, as well as Statistics Canada, Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC) and housing stakeholders.

Pacini said there has been a focus on certain areas of Caledon, including Bolton, Caledon East, Mayfield West and Caledon village. She added data obtained in Caledon is also being compared with that in other places, including Brampton and Mississauga, as well as Aurora, Whitchurch-Stouffville and Halton Hills.

She also observed that the housing market can be seen as a continuum, where supply responds to the range of demand in a community. As well, there are non-market factors, such as emergency shelters, transitional housing, supportive housing, social housing and affordable.

Addressing demand, Johanna Hashim of SHS Consulting pointed out the number of households in Caledon is increasing, but not as fast as it is in the rest of Peel. Caledon's population increased by 31.4 per cent between 2001 and 2016, while the population in Peel went up by 39.7 per cent. The number of households in Caledon also increased by about 31.9 per cent, compared with 39.3 per cent in Peel, but Caledon's numbers are expected to increase faster by 2031, on the order fo 60 per cent, to 20.4 per cent in Peel.

Hashim also pointed out the need for housing options to facilitate aging in place is increasing, and she added that while the numbers are rising in all age groups, it's fast for seniors.

One man argued that's not an emerging trend, but it's been the case for some time.

As well, Hashim observed the current housing needs in Caledon is for options for families and a couples. But there is also an emerging need for options for seniors, people with disabilities and people living alone. She stated that in 2016, a quarter of the households in Caledon had four people, and 29.1 per cent were two-person households.

Another point Hashim made is there are very limited rental options in Caledon. As of 2011, only 8.1 per cent of residents rented their lodgings, while the number was 22 per cent for Peel.

Another factor Hashim pointed to was the relatively high incomes of Caledon residents. The average household income in Caledon is $133,015, while the Peel average is $105,575.

She also observed there are certain household types that are likely to have lower incomes, and that suggests the need for affordable options.

One man observed that people tend not to move away as they get older, but rather are inclined to stay put.

Councillor Annette Groves stated there are a lot of seniors in the community and there just isn't enough housing for them. She said there are now more seniors in Caledon than teenagers, and a lot of older people are leaving because of a lack of appropriate accommodations.

Addressing issues of supply, Hashim observed most homes in Caledon are single-detached units, amounting to about 83.4 per cent, as opposed to 45.6 per cent in Peel. Units like these are ideal for families with children, but Hashim said they might not be as good for the elderly or disabled.

Another problem is house prices are increasing in Caledon, making homeownership unaffordable for households with low or moderate incomes. The average price in 2005 was a little more than $389,000, but it's expected it's up to more than $988,000 this year. Add to that a limited number of rental units in town, accounting for only about five per cent of the market.

of the need for affordable housing, adding there are hopes this study will help in that regard. She also said rental units don't have to be just in high rises.

"Rental can be anything," she said.

One woman observed these issues are all over the Greater Toronto Area, and not just Caledon.

Pacini added there have been many studies done, and economics say it doesn't make sense to build rental units.

One man commented there seems to be a boom in seniors' housing development in Georgetown and Orangeville.

"They seem to be way ahead of us in having planned this," he remarked.

Hashim commented that the number Caledon households facing affordability issues is increasing. Citing data from 2011, she 21.3 per cent of Caledon households were spending 30 per cent of their income on shelter, and nine per cent were spending at least 50 per cent.

The average rent in Caledon is about $1,742 per month, and Hashim said affording that requires an income of $69,680. She added the average house price in Caledon is $988,237, requiring an income of $244,800.

"People who are now in Caledon are lucky," she remarked.

One man pointed out the quality of available employment in Caledon is an issue.

"We're building warehouses," he observed, adding people working in such facilities can't afford to live here. He pointed to the need to attract better-paying jobs.

Police warn of suspicious male

Caledon OPP are seeking information on a young man who came into contact with a family Sunday.

The incident took place at about 5:30 p.m. in the parking area for the Humber Valley Heritage Trail on Duffys Lane.

Police said the family was approached by a white male believed to be in his late teens or early 20s. He was about six feet in height, with dirty blond hair (two or three inches in length), wearing blue jeans with a light coloured T-shirt and dark round sunglasses. After verbally engaging the family, the male entered a newer model silver Lexus SUV and proceeded to follow the family on the roadway.

Anyone with information as to the identity of the driver is asked to contact the police at (905) 584-2241 or toll free at 1-888-310-1122. They can also leave a tip through Crime Stoppers at 1-888-222-TIPS or online at www.peelcrimestoppers.ca

McCallion nominated to airports authority

Former Mississauga mayor Hazel McCallion is one of two nominees to the Greater Toronto Airports Authority's board of directors.

The announcement was made Monday by Transportation Minister Marc Garneau.

McCallion, 96, served as the Mayor of Mississauga from 1978 to 2014, and is the longest-serving mayor in the city's history. She has participated in and led many initiatives locally, provincially, nationally and internationally. In 2015, she was appointed as the first Chancellor of Sheridan College.

The other nominee is Kathleen L. Keller-Hobson, who currently serves on the board of directors of CCL Industries Inc. and Premium Brands Holdings Corporation.

"I am pleased to announce that these highly qualified Canadians have agreed to serve in the transportation sector," Garneau said. "They bring a wealth of experience and their nomination will ensure continued good governance."

CCS gets funds from federal government for LIFE for Youth

By Bill Rea

Providing good training and experience for young people has many spin-off benefits, including to the economy.

That was one of the main points made Monday when Cape Breton—Canso MP Roger Cuzner was in town to announce close to $1.5 million in funding for Caledon Community Services (CCS)'s LIFE for Youth project.

Cuzner, Parliamentary secretary to Employment, Workforce Development and Labour Minister Patty Hajdu, announced the government will provide funding to help 128 young people who need it most to overcome barriers to getting a job or returning to school.

Through the LIFE for Youth project, youth will attend workshops that are tailored to their needs. These include sessions on job searching and networking, time management, communication skills, conflict resolution, stress management and health and safety certification. They will also get valuable work experience in sectors like retail, food services, construction and manufacturing.

The announcement was made at CCS's Evolve store, which CEO Monty Laskin called "Caledon's hottest clothing retail destination."

Laskin commented on the need for young people to be able to get some real-world work experience in order to get ahead. By matching the youth with local employers, he pointed out that also helps the local economy.

In making the announcement, Cuzner commented that the program means a lot to Hajdu.

"This is a pretty neat announcement," he added, pointing out the program is important in getting young people practical experience to help them get into the job market.

The government put out calls for applications for federal funding, and some 900 agencies across the country applied. He also said the application from CCS stood out above many of them.

"Kudos to the organization," he declared, adding the funding for the program will bring long-term benefit to the community.

Cuzner said the federal government can be of considerable help when it works with communities, allowing the local authorities to establish what is needed, and coming up with local solutions, while the government partners and supports.

He also pointed out there have been a lot of stories about young people being unable to get jobs because they lack experience.

Helping to get them into the workforce builds confidence.

"This will help benefit 128 young people in this community," he said.

"It takes a village," he added. "We're very happy that the government of Canada's been able to help this village."

"The LIFE for Youth project will give Bolton's young people the chance to develop their skills and gain work experience," Cuzner observed. "Setting youth up for success is part of our government's plan to create long-term economic growth."

The government announced in the 2017 budget that $400 million would be set aside for youth employment initiatives, and that includes helping some 33,000 vulnerable youth all over the country. He also said the government has doubled the number of summer jobs available this year.

CCS's Director of Employment and Development Cathy Perennec McLean said the LIFE for Youth program has completed its 10th cycle. She added 240 youths have been served in the program, with a success rate of 73 per cent.

"We're grateful for this multi-year investment that the government of Canada is making in our community's youth," Laskin remarked. "LIFE for Youth has a tremendous track record, largely due to the time and attention given to these young people by Caledon Community Services staff and local employers. We're all working towards the same thing — a bright future in today's labour market for youth to overcome barriers through expert training and coaching."

Cape Breton—Canso MP Roger Cuzner (third from left), Parliamentary secretary to Employment, Workforce Development and Labour Minister Patty Hajdu, was in town to announce close to $1.5 million in funding for Caledon Community Services (CCS)'s LIFE for Youth project. He is seen here with CCS's Director of Employment and Development Cathy Perennec McLean, Office and Facilities Co-ordinator and LIFE for Youth graduate Kenia Garcia, Vaughan-Woodbridge MP Francesco Sorbara, Caledon Community Services CEO Monty Laskin, Mayor Allan Thompson and Councillor Johanna Downey, who sits on the CCS Board.

Caledon resident charged in TTC benefit fraud case

A 55-year-old Caledon resident is among several people who have been charged in a benefits fraud case involving Toronto Transit Commission (TTC) employees.

Toronto Police report they received a complaint in January 2015 from TTC and Manulife alleging false medical claims being submitted through Health Fit in Mississauga and Toronto. Charges were laid in that investigation, but police said they received a similar complaint from Manulife in November 2016, made on behalf of the City of Toronto.

The latest allegation is the owner and an employee of a business were providing medical products and services in Mississauga and Toronto between Nov. 30, 2011 and July 21, 2015. Police said they apparently counselled and conspired with numerous TTC employees, who submitted more than $5 million in claims to the insurance provider, Manulife and that they split the insurance payments with the customer. Police also alleged the owner of the company, a 46-year-old Mississauga man, defrauded the City in a similar manner, involving several municipal employees submitting approximately $96,000 in claims to Manulife. These claims were also split between employees and the company.

The owner of the company is charged with two counts of fraud over $5,000, conspiracy to commit an indictable offence (fraud over $5,000) and laundering proceeds of crime. His employee, a 32-year-old Toronto resident, is charged with fraud over $5,000 and conspiracy to commit an indictable offence.

The Caledon resident is among 10 TTC employees charged with fraud over $5,000.

Stolen property recovered in town

A 41-year-old man from Caledon has been charged in connection with the theft of mini excavator (Bobcat) from Toronto.

Caledon OPP reports officers from the Street Crime Unit started an investigation in May into the missing equipment.

As a result, a search warrant was executed at a home in Caledon.

The man was arrested and charged with possession of property obtained by crime over $5,000 and altering, destroying or removing a vehicle identification number.

Boards will hold orientation day for new school bus riders

The two local school boards will be combining in August to host a free Young Rider Orientation Day.

It will be Aug. 26 at various locations, including St. Michael Catholic Secondary School in Bolton, and will be aimed at helping new students feel more comfortable taking the school bus. This year, approximately 65,000 Peel District School Board and Dufferin-Peel Catholic District School Board students will ride the school bus each day. Both boards have provided joint busing service since 1994.

“Now in its 25th year, this orientation will give children confidence when riding the bus to and from school and will reinforce the importance of bus safety,” Tom Howe, manager of Student Transportation of Peel Region (STOPR), said. “Parents and children will watch a bus safety video, discuss their bus safety concerns and ride on a school bus.”

The program, designed for kindergarten children and their elementary-aged siblings, as well as eligible French Immersion students, will run every hour between 9 a.m. and noon.

To help children feel more at ease with their first school bus experience, parents can talk about bus rides as fun adventures. Parents should try not to be anxious in front of their children. Parents can also establish a routine by taking a few walks to the bus stop before the first day of school.

They should also keep children organized. A backpack is easier for students to carry than many small items.

Make sure children recognize their bus stop location and carry identification in case they get lost.

Teach them bus safety rules, such as listening to the bus driver’s instructions, staying seated on the bus and respecting other students.

Parents should also teach traffic safety. If children must cross the street to get to the bus stop, remind them to wait until the bus stops, activates its flashing lights and the stop arm before they look in both directions and cross.

There will also be an orientation session that day at St. Marguerite d’Youville Secondary School at 10815 Dixie Rd. in Brampton.

To confirm attendance and preferred time slot, parents are asked to call Parkview Transit at 905-857-9894, or 905-584-0400.

Heatherlea’s Café receives Feast On certification

Heatherlea Farm Shoppe’s café joins more than 122 other Ontario establishments committed to local food through their newly acquired Feast On certification.

This designation enables diners to identify restaurants that use local foods, thus supporting the local economy and Ontario agriculture. With Heatherlea’s home-raised meats, Ontario provisions and passion for promoting local food, the program was a perfect match for them.

Heatherlea, on Winston Churchill Boulevard in Caledon, has always had an eye on the Feast On program and became eligible when they opened a café in their brand new building in January 2016. In keeping with Heatherlea’s theme for local food, they curated a menu that changes with the seasons. Patrons will find hand-crafted sandwiches, flavourful soups, tempting baked goods and artisanal beverages. A few of the local favourites include the breakfast sandwich, featuring a house-made beef sausage patty; the reuben sandwich with Heatherlea beef, dressing and fermented sauerkraut; and “the best ever grilled cheese sandwich,” which seems to be living up to its name.

The foods that make up their menu are largely from Ontario — 96 per cent to be exact. This wouldn’t be possible without the partnerships of other local farmers and producers. Partners include small neighborhood farmers like Cathy Hansen, who provides some of the best organic greens, kale and carrots to larger farms like VG Meats in Simcoe. Another partner, 100 KM Foods Inc., specializes in distributing for small-scale farms, which alleviates a common barrier for small growers.

Heatherlea’s owners and operators Pat and Gord McArthur recognize first-hand the importance of supporting local food. It’s putting dollars back into communities, reducing environmental impacts and making farming sustainable for future generations. The Ministry of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs reports that local food in Ontario is thriving and they are well on their way to meet the 2020 vision for Ontario Local Food.

The continued solid growth of local food relies on consumers and where they choose to spend their dollars. Feast On offers an easy online navigation to find local food establishments, from food trucks to fine dining and everything in between.

Annual Caledon Pit Run and Open House taking place this Saturday

Lafarge and Acon will be hosting the sixth annual Caledon Pit Run this Saturday (July 29).

Last year’s event was a huge success; attracting more than 100 runners, 300 visitors and raising $30,000 for Caledon Central Public School.

As with previous years, the Caledon Pit Run will take place within the 2nd Concession of the Caledon Pit, southwest of Charleston Sideroad and Willoughby Road.

This will be a unique opportunity for visitors to experience a five-kilometre cross-country run through an active licensed site. This year, organizers will be adding a family 1K Walk of Memories to commemorate late family members of the participants and a 1K Kids’ Obstacle Course.

During the event, they will again be featuring an open house with silent auction, supervised kids’ activities, a sponsor expo, and the very popular rock truck rides.

This year’s event is being run in support of Caledon’s Bethell Hospice Foundation. In 2016, Bethell Hospice (originally Hospice Caledon) celebrated its 25th year of providing community-based palliative care and compassionate support to families struggling with a life-challenging illness. Bethell Hospice gets only part of its funding from government, so the Foundation is required to raise almost $1,000,000 each year to keep the doors open to serve the community. There are no fees to stay at Bethell Hospice, no fees to participate in any of the community support programs and no one is ever denied access due to financial situation. In past years, the run has cumulatively raised $46,500 for Bethell, and they are hoping to raise $40,000 this year.

The goal this year is to attract at least 300 participants to the event.

Registration is open until 6 p.m. July 27, 2017. Go to www.caledonpitrun.ca for more information.

“Kidz in Caledon Benefits Local Family”

excerpted from an article by Cassandra Briscoe, CCS Volunteer

CCS’ Kidz in Caledon program provides assistance to families across the Caledon community. Jodi is one of many parents that benefit from the program to help her as a mother raising two young sons.

Jodi has been calling Caledon home since the age of 4. While she considers Caledon a great place to live and raise a family, CCS has helped Jodi along the way. “I have been using CCS since they opened in the courtyard. I started looking for employment opportunities with Jobs Caledon and saw all the other branches of help they had to offer,” she said.

With two sons under 10 years old, Jodi tries to provide them opportunities to learn, make friends, and develop passions. However, this can be very difficult and out of reach. Kidz in Caledon helps make this possible. Her oldest son recently developed a passion for music. While at the Exchange (located on Healey Road, Bolton) her son noticed a keyboard in the lounge area and really loved the sound. With the encouraging words and cheerful attitude of CCS Care Coordinator Lori Pirroncello, her son decided he would love to play music. Unfortunately, lessons and instruments can be very expensive. Luckily, we have Kidz in Caledon to help. Jodi and Lori sat down and were able to set up music lessons for her son. He is now learning to play the guitar and has a real passion for playing. Jodi has seen a positive change in her son. “It helps him get out and gives him a nice summer routine. He gets to interact with peers and other members of the community while doing something that he loves.”

While Kidz in Caledon has helped Jodi as a mother, she also benefitted from other CCS services. The food pantry, Santa Fund gift program, cooking classes, job workshops, and more helped Jodi at one point or another. “The workers are all so encouraging. Lori has motivated me in so many ways. It’s a good feeling to know someone has your back.”

Jodi now encourages friends and family to utilize the services CCS has to offer and reassures them not to be embarrassed or ashamed. “It’s okay to ask for help, CCS is there for a reason and it changed my life as well as my kids’ lives.” “CCS really is a great service for the community, it has been my rock for the last couple years and gives my kids better opportunities for a bright future,” Jodi comments.

NEW Hearing Aid Technology

Finally a hearing aid that allows you to hear in all directions!

This latest digital technology solves the biggest challenge for hearing aid wearers – hearing well in noisy environments.

Traditional hearing aids only allow the wearer to hear in one direction, which can make it difficult to hear in a public setting like a restaurant. Now with this new breakthrough technology, the wearer can enjoy a dynamic soundscape and differentiate between speech and noise.

Nobody will notice it because of its minute size, fitting snugly and comfortably just behind the ear. Everything works automatically, so you can get back to enjoying your relationships, rather than thinking about your hearing.

Free yoga/meditation day at Cold Creek

Meditation Toronto will be hosting a Free Yoga Meditation day at the Cold Creek Conservation Area in Nobleton Aug. 12 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This is a very nice day for the whole family. Children are welcome. There will be supervised activities for the kids.

This is the ninth annual event of this kind that Meditation Toronto has hosted. It's very popular, attracting in excess of 300 people.

The day begins with Hatha Yoga classes for all levels, conducted by qualified instructors, followed by a vegetarian lunch. After lunch, guests are invited to explore the beautiful forests and hiking trails.

The day finishes with an enlivening group meditation and a talk by a renowned yoga master.

Participants will need to bring a yoga mat, sun gear (sunglasses, sunscreen and a hat), bug repellent is always a good idea as the event is outdoors, and most important, a smiling face.

It's a lovely way to spend a day and it's all free. Free tickets can be obtained online at www.meditationtoronto.com

Meditation Toronto has been giving free classes in the GTA for more than 20 years as a service to the community. They give classes in Richmond Hill and Newmarket regularly.

The Frank Cowan Company Home Town Program, along with local broker Secure Insurance, is contributing $5,000 to Artful Caledon, a program that offers young artists the opportunity to create and display their works throughout the Caledon Public Library network.

"Art should be accessible to everyone in a community," Mayor Allan Thompson said. "With our extensive library network, this generous gift will enhance quality of life throughout Caledon."

"The Home Town Program was created to provide assistance to municipal initiatives such as Artful Caledon," Frank Cowan Company President Larry Ryan said. "This is a great opportunity to promote personal enjoyment, intellectual stimulation and public involvement through art."

"One of our key goals is to foster the creativity of local youth through innovative programming," Caledon Public Library Board Chair Janet Manning commented. "The Artful Caledon project will provide time and space for our budding artists to create and display their work."

"We are proud to partner with the Frank Cowan Company and their Home Town Program," Secure Insurance Solutions Group Inc. Partner and Vice-President Patrick Molloy said. "For us, it is a great opportunity to assist in the promotion of grass roots initiatives that encourage, foster and promote the arts community."

Chad Brownlee headlines Hoedown's Friday night

Award-winning country singer Chad Brownlee will headline the first night of Magna's annual Wild, Wild West Hoedown.

Brownlee, an award-winning singer, songwriter, philanthropist and former NHL draft pick, will open York Region's biggest two-night party, starting with a rollicking show Sept. 15.

"With over a billion radio impressions to date, his singles have rapidly climbed the country music charts," observed Erin Cerenzia, coordinator of Magna for the Community and Neighbourhood Network. "Most recently, he garnered a highly coveted 2017 Juno Award nomination for Country Album of the Year, earned Gold certification for his single, I Hate You For It, celebrated his first video on CMT, and achieved his third consecutive Top 10 hit with the single Somethin' We Shouldn't Do."

Brownlee's story is a unique one on the country music scene.

Few emerging country stars can boast about making the NHL draft, nor his philanthropic work with the Tim Horton Children's Foundation, but he says he "lives by the credence that opportunity lies along the path created by the choices you make."

Since embarking on his country music career, he has racked up more than one billion radio impressions so far and has also received recognition on the road with his Hearts on Fire Tour, launched in January, which he co-headlined in some venues with fellow country star Tim Hicks.

"(I Hate You For It) is my favourite song on the new album," he said of Hearts on Fire. "It's got an edge that is slightly softened by an underlying addictive love. We can become entangled in one another. A conscious knowing of the intoxicating power one person can have over our emotions. We lay prisoner to the chains of infatuation. Like the lyrics say, one is literally 'punch drunk crazy!'"

Hearts on Fire is his fourth studio album. It is characterized as "reflective, conveying a philosophical honesty regarding his musical journey."

"(It is) quite surreal actually," he said. "I'm starting to grow to accept how incomprehensible time is. I really didn't know what to expect when I started down this music road. It's like watching a bucket of water fill up one drop at a time. In the moment it may seem slow, but before you know it, the drops have filled the entire bucket."

"At the beginning of my journey, and still to this day, I just want to write the best song in each moment of creativity and sing the best I can sing each time I perform."

Property tax information for newly constructed homes

The following is important information for residents that recently moved into a newly constructed home:

Property Tax Due Dates are the first Thursday of March, May, July and September.

Tax Assessment

- If the Municipal Property Assessment Corporation (MPAC) has not assessed your house yet, the Town may have calculated and billed your property taxes based on the value of your land only.
- It may take up to 3 years after occupancy before your property assessment reflects the value of both the land and the house.
- When MPAC has reassessed a property because of additions or improvements that increase its market value or when MPAC has assessed a new home or building, the Town issues supplementary tax bills.
- For newly constructed homes that are currently assessed at land only, once the full assessment information becomes available, the Town will send a supplementary tax bill.
- The supplementary tax bill can date back three years and will be for taxes payable less any taxes already billed which were based on the land value only.

Pre-Authorized Payment Plan (PAP)

- Your PAP application will be included with your final tax bill. The PAP application form is also available on the Town's website at: www.caledon.ca/tax
- Pre-authorized payment withdrawals are made on the first of the month, January through October OR on tax installment due dates, based on the PAP plan selected.

Semi-detached and Townhomes

When a large piece of land, such as the land on which semi-detached and townhomes are built, is divided into a series of smaller parcels of land, it is often necessary to "apportion" taxes from the original land block to the new individual parcels. MPAC assigns each of the new parcels an individual roll number and an assessment value for the land. When the Town receives this apportionment information from MPAC, an adjustment to the taxes is created and bills are issued.

Want an estimate of your taxes?

Check out the property tax calculator at www.caledon.ca/tax to obtain an estimate of your annual taxes.

For more information, please contact the Tax Office at 905.584.2272 ext. 7750.

Keeping Caledon Clean

The Town of Caledon's Clean Yards By-law sets out the minimum standards for property maintenance within the Town. The standards prescribed in this By-law are intended to ensure reasonable maintenance and care of land.

HIGHLIGHTS

- All property owners are to cut and maintain the grass on their lawns. Grass and weeds cannot exceed 8 inches or 20 centimeters.
- All properties are to be kept clear of garbage, yard waste, appliances, machinery and machinery equipment, containers, sewage and materials from construction or demolition projects.
- All properties are to be kept clear of derelict vehicles, unless the derelict vehicle and its parts are kept in an enclosed building.

The By-law empowers the Town, when it receives a complaint, to issue Orders promptly to property owners and tenants in order to maintain compliance with standards in the Clean Yards By-law.

For more information on the Town's efforts to Keep Caledon Clean, please contact 905.584.2272 x.3462 or bylaw@caledon.ca.

There was all kinds of fun available over the weekend in Caledon East as the Rotary Club of Bolton hosted their annual Rotaryfest. In keeping with tradition, ribs were among the main food items available, and there were lines-ups at the various stands of hungry rib fans. Jamieson Papas of Fat Boys Barbecue was busy putting lots of sauce on this rack.

Rotarian Scott Fraser, co-chair of Rotaryfest, welcomed the crowds Friday night, accompanied by Dufferin-Caledon MPP Sylvia Jones, Mayor Allan Thompson and Carlos Martins of Fines Ford Lincoln, who sponsored the Friday night activities.

Fines Ford Lincoln brought out members of Paw Patrol Sunday. Jimmy Pounthey of Bolton and his daughter Grace, 4, were among those who got to meet them.

Stairway to common sense?

We have to be a little guarded about the topic we're about to address.

While it deals with an event that we applaud, it's also something we need to be careful about encouraging.

An Etobicoke senior, named Adi Astl, was evidently getting tired about steep embankment from street level to an area park. There had been reports that people had been injured trying to access the park.

Officials from the City of Toronto had apparently looked at the situation, and determined that rectifying it would be expensive. Published estimates have ranged from $65,000 to $150,000.

Astl, according to reports, took matters into his own hands, went out and bought some wood, enlisted the assistance of another man, and built a set of stairs. It's also reported that some of his neighbours chipped in on the project, which cost about $550. Looking at the lowest estimates that apparently came from the City, the project cost about 0.846 per cent of the projections.

"I thought they were talking about an escalator," Astl commented, according to CTV News.

In addition, the project took a matter of hours to complete.

And, according to published accounts, the stairs appeared to be completely serviceable.

Mayor John Tory was correct when he agreed the figures from the City were "completely out of whack with reality," according to CTV

And in keeping with reality, Astl has been receiving considerable praise for his action.

We have heard of at least one resident ready to reimburse him for the $550, and others seem willing to chip in as well.

The steps were removed Friday morning, but Tory has said there will be a set of stairs installed to City standards, with a ceiling cost of $10,000. That's a lot more than Astl spent, but it certainly more realistic than the figures the City had reportedly quoted.

There are many who are looking to Astl as a hero, and with good reason. We all tend to admire people who stand up to the system

But we also acknowledge that it is not something we can encourage.

This man broke the rules, even if it is generally acknowledged that his heart was in the right place. And no matter how absurd they might appear to be, those rules are in place for reasons; usually very good reasons.

No matter how skilled a craftsman might be, if public infrastructure is going to be the result, it has to be built to a certain standard, and that means reviews of plans, inspections, etc. And if public dollars are going to be spent on such projects, there must be officials in place to ensure those doing the job really know what they are doing, and are doing the work properly. Such checks are necessary, and they unfortunately can cost a lot of money, although it is clearly easy to argue that something in the range of 65 to 150 grand for a job like this is ridiculous.

We must always be mindful that a failure in such a construction can lead to injuries, and that can add up to serious legal and financial issues for the municipality. In fact, if the reports are true that there had been injuries sustained by people traversing the slope Astl was so concerned about, we have to wonder if there has already been legal action, and why the City hasn't already acted.

We can't believe the conditions and frustrations Astl encountered are unique to Toronto. Obviously, there are people in every municipality, including Caledon, who are not pleased with the way things are, and are of the opinion that steps to rectify them are not being taken fast enough.

There are many who would like to take actions similar to those of Astl, and many more who would applaud, even if they themselves could not bring themselves to act.

But this is not a time for copycats.

Acts like those of Astl might produce desired results, but only if they used very infrequently. Having them become too common could result in stronger sanctions against the transgressors.

Is that what we really want to see?

Not surprised O.J.'s getting out

It's something I wouldn't have even thought of doing some 20 years ago, but I confess I did it last Thursday.

I guess my curiosity got the better of me.

I actually wasted time in the middle of a work day listening to the OJ Simpson parole hearing from Nevada. In fact, I logged onto the CNN website and actually got the TV coverage, but I only listened, continuing to work on a pile of about 200 emails that required my attention that day. I watched only certain portions, such as looking for his reaction when the final decision was announced. I hope my boss isn't too mad at me.

As I stated, I was curious how things would go for the most prominent performer in the judicial system since Perry Mason.

I was not surprised by the result. I had read and heard several opinions expressed by various lawyers and other people who may or may not have known what they were talking about. The consensus appeared to be that there was really no good reason for keeping the man in prison much longer.

Simpson was sent away in 2008 for up to 33 years for a whole bunch of charges, like kidnapping, armed robbery, assault with a deadly weapon, etc. There are some who, I suppose, wonder if he was also doing time for a double murder rap. I have to confess I'm in that group too.

I remember thinking at the time of Simpson's sentencing that he was hit harder than was appropriate, considering it was a first offence of such allegations and he evidently believed he had, at the time, some reason to justify his actions. Despite that, I have watched the sentencing (the broadcast is easy to find on the internet), and the judge asserted his legal history had nothing to do with the sanctions that were being imposed.

And there is considerable evidence that he has tried to make good while in prison. It's been cited that he's mentored others, been active in recreational activities and lobbied for better education programs for inmates.

From what I heard last week, he came across as articulate and well-spoken. And while there was some attempt to justify what he had done to get him sent to the joint, there were also words indicating he accepted responsibility for his actions, and that he regretted them. But of course, he's also an actor.

So while I wasn't surprised, I can't say I was either pleased or displeased with the news. I guess I'm sort of neutral on the whole thing.

I am mindful that Simpson's former wife Nicole and another man, Ron Goldman, were brutally murdered in June 1994. It didn't take too long for suspicion to fall on Simpson.

Like most other people who were conscious at the time, I was aware of the case, but I did not join in with the obsession that seemed to grip so many people. Everyone seemed to be talking about it. I was in a restaurant not too long after the murders, and since I was alone, I had brought a magazine (either Time or Newsweek — I forget which) to read as I ate. I was looking at an article about OJ. The server noticed what I was reading, and asked me if I thought he had done it. I declined to comment — it's rude to talk with your mouth full.

There was the memorable Friday night that featured the infamous slow-speed Bronco chase. I missed it because I was otherwise engaged. I was sitting in a theatre watching a movie with the lady I was going with at the time. As of Tuesday of this week, we have been married 19 years. Needless to say, I had a much more productive evening than yee who wasted your time watching that stupidity in L.A.

I read little of the subsequent trial. But as I was driving home at night, there would be lots of details offered on what had gone on in court that day on trusty take radio.

Most of the trial was televised, and I know there were plenty of people who watched in religiously. Since I was gainfully employed at the time, I didn't have time for daytime TV. But there was a day when I was at home during the trial (maybe during my vacation) and curiosity prompted me to tune in. Boredom overcame curiosity after about 10 minutes, and I probably plunked a classic movie into my VCR.

Although I was following the case on a casual basis, as the trial progressed, there was one thing of which I became convinced — the issue as to whether Simpson actually killed these two people was becoming less important in this proceeding. Thus, I was not too surprised when the not-guilty verdict came down.

Yet we all know there are many who disagree with that verdict.

In 1996, the late Vincent Bugliosi, the man who prosecuted Charles Manson and subsequently co-wrote Helter Skelter, published another book entitled Outrage: The Five Reasons Why O.J. Simpson Got Away with Murder. He was later involved with a video in which he made his case. I've seen it on the internet and I recommend it to anyone who's interested (get comfortable, because it's almost four hours long). He pulled very few punches, slamming what he saw as a bad jury, incompetent prosecutors and a trial judge who left a great deal to be desired, among other things.

That puts me in a rather awkward position. I have always believed in our judicial system which states, among other things, that if a jury decides you're not guilty of something, it means you're innocent. There have been plenty of cases in which people have been found guilty of crimes they didn't commit, so it stands to reason there are lots of others who got off when they should have been punished.

There are some who believe Simpson got away with murder and fret. I accept the verdict of the jury, and wonder.

Rotary Club of Palgrave's Weekly Rotary Minute

By Cheryl May

My Sister's Place, a women's shelter in Alliston, recently wrote us to thank us for our purchasing and installing playground equipment at the shelter.

Through the community's generous donations, we have been able to support this organization over the years that helps local families in crisis.

Your support enabled the purchasing (for both the shelter and second stage residences) of new, usable and age-appropriate equipment for the children to use outside. As you may recognize, families in the shelter environment are under some extremely stressful circumstances. Supplying dramatic play environments and fine motor toys allows the children to "work through" some of their stresses in an age-appropriate, safe manner. It allows their caregivers to interact with them and have fun, in a safe and secure environment.

Prior to our most recent purchases, the equipment that we had available was aged and very well used. Offering some new equipment and being a part of the decision-making processes (on what to buy, etc.) was the highlight of the summer for the children on site here.

Our needs continue to grow as our services are used, and we are very grateful for donations of clothing and small kitchen appliances/items, as women need them for their day to day use, and for moving forward into more permanent housing situations. We happily accept cash and gift cards for those same purposes, as is the cases with Michael L. and his generous donation.

Our statistics show that we served 140 women and children in shelter last year, and seven families in our second and third stage housing units. We supported 75 women with transitional housing support and 64 women in an outreach capacity with legal advocacy. We find that single women and families are staying longer with us as they struggle to find affordable housing in their home communities.

It happened today

For a fictional character, he's certainly accomplished a lot over the years.

He's usually (not always) been portrayed as the "good guy," and he's been very good at outsmarting his adversaries, be they ducks, hunters, coyotes, Martians and even Tasmanian devils.

Bugs Bunny made his debut in a short, entitled A Wild Hare, this day, July 27, 1940.

Trudeau’s carbon tax is going to be costly for Canadians

Undoubtedly, the current Liberal government’s carbon tax is going to be expensive for Canadians.

It’s going to impact every Canadian, as well as businesses in Canada. It understandably raises questions and concerns for hardworking Canadian families who are trying to pay their bills and don’t need to be burdened with another tax to pay for Prime Minister Trudeau’s pet projects.

The Conservative Official Opposition has stood up for Canadians ever since the current Liberal government announced its carbon tax. We recognize that the Canadian taxpayer will foot the bill and it’s considerable. The Liberal government’s own numbers say that they will be imposing a tax of 11 cents per litre on gasoline alone by 2022. Furthermore, the overall cost has been pegged at anywhere from $1,250 to $2,500 per year for the average family. In fact, research shows that low-income Canadians will have the hardest time paying a carbon tax, as this new tax makes the cost of necessities, like home heating, food and fuel more expensive. What’s more concerning is that the current Liberal government hasn’t been completely honest with Canadians about how much it will cost them after campaigning on a platform of transparency during the last election.

OTTAWA JOURNAL

David Tilson
MP Dufferin-Caledon

The carbon tax is a cash grab that will do nothing to reduce emissions and nothing to improve the quality of our air and water. It’s nothing more than a new source of money for the current government to spend on its pet projects. It also comes at a time when Canada’s neighbour to the south is moving in the opposite direction — putting Canada at a significant competitive disadvantage. It is not difficult to comprehend that Canadian firms and foreign investors won’t invest in the Canadian economy if they do not know the overall cost of doing business vis-à-vis our American counterparts. The current Liberal government should actually be working to improve Canada’s competitive advantage to support Canadian businesses, not imposing a job killing carbon tax on provinces and territories.

The Conservative Official Opposition will continue to stand up and be the voice of hardworking Canadians and their families. We will continue to hold the current Liberal government accountable for the cost of the carbon tax and its impact on both Canadian families and business, as well as other tax hikes. Canadians deserve better from their government.

What I heard at changing workplaces committee

The Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs has been on consulting on the government’s recent introduction of Bill 148.

The proposed legislation would make substantial changes to the labour laws in the province of Ontario. The proposed changes include expanding personal emergency leave to 10 days including two paid days, expanding vacation time, changes to the rules around shifts and changes to the collective bargaining rules. While these changes are substantial and important, most of the media and public discussion has been focused on a proposed increase to the minimum wage to $15 an hour by 2019, a 32 per cent increase in 18 months.

The proposed changes in Bill 148 — Fair Workplaces, Better Jobs Act, 2017 are substantial. Bill 148 passed first reading June 1. Understanding that the proposed amendments are significant and include many changes in Ontario labour laws; the Legislative Assembly referred Bill 148 to the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs to hold public hearings over the summer after first reading.

I joined the Standing Committee’s

FROM QUEEN’S PARK
Sylvia Jones
MPP Dufferin-Caledon

meeting in Kitchener July 18. I heard from businesses leaders, labour law experts, employees and more. What is clear from these discussions is that the changes proposed are wide-ranging and complex. It reinforces to me several things. First, many businesses are concerned about what the changes will mean to their future. Many believe the 32 per cent increase in the minimum wage is coming too quickly. Many businesses felt “blindsided” by the proposal because it was only recently that the government had been defending its plan to tie the minimum wage to inflation, as well as giving businesses ample forewarning of an increase. Some businesses emphasized that they would love to pay their staff more, but are seriously concerned that they cannot handle such a swift increase. As one presenter put it, “I have to come up with $1.5 million and I don’t really know how I’m going to do that.”

Second, it is clear to me that many Ontarians are feeling pressure on their budget. Life has simply become more unaffordable for many families across Ontario; from hydro rates to housing prices. I heard emotional testimony from individuals who are facing immense pressure to pay the bills.

Finally it is clear that before we move ahead with these changes, the government needs to have an economic impact study so we can know what these changes mean for employees and the businesses they work for. After all, the Premier’s own Advisory Panel on minimum wage found that for every 10 per cent you raise the minimum wage, youth employment goes down six per cent.

If you have comments regarding Bill 148 please contact my office at 519-941-7751 or by email at sylvia.jonesqp@pc.ola.org

Hearing your concerns on these changes will help me continue to advocate for Dufferin-Caledon.

But for the grace of God, and my dogs

By Aldonna Kaulius-Barry

On a beautiful summer’s morning, I took time off from writing and drove to Bolton to buy a trunk load of perennials and some bags of earth.

When I got home, a procession of runners in bright coloured running gear were sprinting along the road and so I put my dogs inside a small fenced kennel a few hundred feet away, so they wouldn’t be tempted to follow suit. Both dogs lay down, turned their backs to me and watched with their noses pushed to the fence.

Happy to finally get to planting, I took out the first flat of flowers from my trunk, put on my garden gloves and lost in thought, knelt down and began to dig. From out of nowhere, directly behind me, an unfamiliar voice said, “Get in the house.”

It was surreal. My husband was at work and our property was a good hike from the road and I would have heard a car or even footsteps come up our gravel driveway. As I stood up and turned about, I was shocked to see a very tall, dark haired, heavy-set man in jeans, wearing a huge, old maroon T-shirt lift up his arms and stare at me threateningly. He had come up stealthily from the road on an adjacent property, stood 10 feet away from me and growled, “Don’t make a noise and get in the house.”

I froze and with terrifying thoughts racing through my head answered. “The house is locked and the keys are in the car.”

“Get the keys from the car and get inside the house,” he said in a low foreboding tone. He stepped closer to me, and stretched out his arms in warning.

I knew that I had opened the front door when I got home. I put my purse away and went out and moved the car closer to unload, but I also knew that I was not going into the house with him. In those terrifying seconds I thought I would start the car and try to get away, but when I slid into the front seat my heart constricted. The keys were not in the ignition. They were on the trunk floor beside the flats of plants.

“Don’t move quickly. Don’t scream out. Get the keys, open the door and get inside,” he said in a low tone that now sounded agitated.

Instinctively, I felt that he was going to kill me, and an overwhelming feeling of foreboding flooded me. I glared into his eyes, and suddenly with every ounce of strength in me, I turned and ran down the long grassy slope towards my dogs. I wanted to die near someone who loved me. I could hear his heavy breathing and his footsteps thumping right behind me, but when I reached the gate just ahead of him, I struggled madly, but could not open it. As I thrashed at the metal latches, my beloved Bouvier, Soliel jumped over past my shoulder almost knocking me down, and attacked him. Our huge poodle joined the attack and in those few moments I raced back up the hill, ran inside and with trembling fingers dialed 9-1-1. I wanted to call my husband right after, but the 9-1-1 operator would not let me hang up until the officers arrived. Within minutes, two cruisers were on our property. A third cruiser drove up and the officer spoke with me at length, took down detailed notes and tried to calm me. Within moments, OPP cruisers had sealed off the road to the north and the south of us, and created a net.

An hour later or more, a shadow cruiser drove up and an officer knocked on the door. I gave him a second report. Before he left, he informed me that they had found the man walking up a neighbour’s very long drive-way across the road from us, and that they had him in custody. The back of his shirt and jeans were ripped. He also quietly informed me that this was a far more “serious” situation, and more dangerous than I was led to believe earlier.

“You were very lucky,” he added. “He had a roll of duck-tape hidden on his upper arm beneath his sleeve.”

After I got off the phone with the 9-1-1 operator earlier, and before I called my husband, I quickly called two women who lived on country properties on either side of us and were at-home wives. The first neighbour was home and all was well, but the second who lived directly across the street from us, just north of our property, said that the same man had come to her door half an hour ago and had asked to use the phone for an emergency he’d muttered about, but she refused to let him. When I asked why she didn’t call the police, thus endangering myself and others, she told me that she did day care for three children, and that if they told their parents police had been called, she could have lost them as customers. I was stunned. He could have gone to the back of her unfenced home, and God only knows what he could have done to her and to the children.

Every one of us has a responsibility to watch out for the safety of our children, our elders, our neighbours and our community. If you see something is amiss, or potentially unsafe, call 9-1-1 and report it, rather than risking endangerment.

Years ago, while I was researching a policing and safety project for my Criminology course, I learned that a dog is the best alarm system a home can have. Little did I know that I would one day learn that lesson on my own.

Presumption of innocence crumbling

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Claire Hoy

The notion that a person charged with a criminal offence is innocent until proven guilty obviously has been a mainstay of our court system for centuries.

But with the recent success of determined sexual assault activists, that bedrock belief is beginning to crumble.

We saw this a while back in the over-the-top coverage of the Jian Ghomeshi affair where he was acquitted — thanks largely to the demonstrable disingenuousness and misleading information from his accusers — yet they became folk heroes in certain communities and he became the country’s number one leper.

There is little doubt that Ghomeshi was a cad, a thoroughly unlikeable person who used his so-called CBC celebrity status to satisfy his own lust. But — at least until the horrible new Liberal legislation aimed at making conviction pretty much guaranteed becomes law — being a cad is not a Criminal Code offence worthy of jail time.

I’m reminded of the strident anti-male propaganda out there by the Toronto Star’s Third World War-type coverage of the decision last week by the Ontario Superior Court to overturn an appalling decision by now-retired Ontario Court Justice Marvin Zuker against Mustafa Ururyar, who was found guilty of sexually assaulting his fellow York University PhD student Mandi Gray.

It’s difficult to remember a judicial decision which was as strongly ripped apart as Zuker’s initial conviction of Ururyar was. There is not enough space here to outline the criticisms of Zuker’s findings by the higher court, but one obvious example, cited by Toronto Star columnist Rosie DiManno, was his issuing of “a pre-written sentencing decision immediately after hearing defence submissions without even taking time to consider those materials.”

DiManno notes also that “from the moment Gray testified, Zuker had obviously made up his mind and he jumped through incoherent hoops to get there.”

While DiManno — who, with the possible exception of Christie Blatchford at the National Post, has probably covered more trials than any journalist in the country — dealt fairly with what was clearly an injustice to the accused, most of the so-called “straight” news coverage highlighted the politically inspired outrage from those who believe that a man, once charged, is clearly guilty.

No doubt most men charged are, in fact, guilty. But a)- despite the notion that most men are predators by nature, in fact only a small percentage are; and b)- sometimes, although not often, the accusations are false; and c)- everybody deserves to defend themselves, particularly when it could result in jail time.

It is true that sexual assault cases are usually more difficult to prove than many other types of crime, and therefore the rate of convictions is lower. That’s because it’s too often a he-said, she-said situation, which is rarely the case in other crimes. Even so, some 55 per cent of people (overwhelmingly men) accused of sexual assault are convicted, as are 67 per cent of those accused of other sexual offences.

Yet the Star uncritically reports Angela Chaisson, described as a Toronto activist lawyer, saying that the acquittal of Ururyar “will have an impact on women’s willingness to report sexual assault to the police, which we already know is already dismal. In the rare cases where we actually get a conviction on sexual assault and we see those being overturned on appeal, that can be discouraging...”

Apparently the principle of convicting men outweighs the quaint notion of whether the guy actually did it or not. It is certainly true that many, many women suffer unwanted sexual attention yet do not report it to police, in order to avoid the terrible burden of going over it all again in public. But I think it is also true that by ignoring the specifics of a particular case, i.e. whether the accused’s story is credible or not, and turning it into an example of widespread anti-woman bias in the courts, serves not to help the justice system but to further discourage women from reporting.

The thousands of cases where men are convicted of sexual assault rarely receive the coverage of those few high-profile cases, such as Ghomeshi and now Ururyar, which didn’t go the way the feminist radicals wanted them to go.

Also, even in the face of acquittals, the accusers are inevitably called “victims.” Much is also written about the financial and emotional burden on the accusers, but little is even acknowledged about the horrible burdens on men who — despite being men — are not guilty.

To the applause of supporters outside the court, Gray — whose story was not believed by the higher court — said, “I still know what happened to me, and it doesn’t matter what the legal system thinks.”

Actually, it does matter. Although, with laws rapidly eliminating the notion of a man being able to defend himself, it’s beginning to matter less and less.

Guaranteed smile every time.

Caledon U16 soccer team captures the USA CUP

The Caledon FC 2001 Boys U16 Soccer Team travelled to Blaine, Minn. July 13 to participate in the USA Cup, and came home victorious.

Held annually, the USA Cup is the largest youth international soccer tournament in the Western Hemisphere, and this year it played host to 1,168 teams from 15 different countries.

Playing in the top flight A division, Caledon earned the U16 title defeating two different U.S. state champions, and teams from three different countries in the process.

The tournament, however, did not get off to a great start for the club from Caledon, as they dropped their opening game 2-1 to the defending champions from Eden Prairie, Minn. The sluggish start, after the long bus ride, put CFC in a must win situation for the remainder of the round-robin play. With plenty to play for in the second game against Magic FC, the boys, led by coaches Gaspare Clemenzi and Hardley Scott, put in a strong effort over their foes from North Dakota, dominating possession from start to finish, ending the first day of competition with a 4-0 victory.

In a loser-go-home final round-robin game for both teams, the Caledon boys were matched up against the Nebraska state champions. Caledon played a tactically perfect game, finishing their chances in this one, sending the SSC Diablos home early with a 3-0 final.

In the quarter-final match, Caledon faced a strong academy team from Costa Rica. In a great showcase of skill and tactical play by both sides, it took extra time before Caledon was able to come away with the favorable 2-1 result, punching their ticket to semifinals.

Twinstars Academy Elite, the Minnesota state champions, came into the semifinals undefeated and without surrendering a goal in the tournament. However, the club from Caledon was again up for the task.

This match was a very physical affair, resulting in injuries to key players and ending with a 0-0 score in regulation time. Overtime could not produce a winner, forcing the result to be decided by penalty kicks. Caledon FC goalkeeper Liam McKendry made a great diving save on one of the final Twinstars' attempts from the spot and Caledon's shooters went a perfect five-for-five, earning the right to play for the cup.

With a few players unavailable for the cup final game, CFC's depth and perseverance was on full display as they took on Thunder Bay in an all-Canadian, US Cup final. Despite taking an early 2-0 lead, it would again take extra time before scoring the 3-2 Cup winner, delighting the hundreds of supporters who watched the tense, live broadcast from home.

The CaledonFC 2001 Boys play in the GHSL Regional Elite league. They will put their current undefeated league record on the line next when they play Hamilton at home tonight (Thursday).

The Caledon FC 2001 Boys U16 Soccer Team were victorious in the USA Cup tournament recently in Minnesota.

Bolton Brewers on a roll heading into North Dufferin playoffs

By Jake Courtepatte

The Bolton Brewers are on the hot-streak of their season at just the right time.

Rapidly climbing the ladder of the North Dufferin Baseball League standings since late June, a trio of wins over the weekend has Bolton riding 14 straight victories, the longest streak of any team in the AA league.

Brennan Horan of the Lisle Astros was able to hold off the hot offence of the Brewers for the first four innings of their match Friday, before a three-run fifth inning and two-run sixth helped Bolton to a 6-3 win.

Nick Pattinaro earned his fifth win of the season on the hill for the first five innings of work, giving up just three runs and striking out five.

Greg Keenan closed out the final two innings almost to perfection, allowing just one base runner.

Mike Wallace, the league leader in both hits and runs, cashed in his first home run of the season to add to his inventory.

Sunday's visit to Ivy to take on the Leafs turned into an aggressive pitching battle between two of the league's best on the mound, with Bolton's Trent Barwick squaring up against Ivy's Jeremy Uylenbroek.

Brent Barwick and Carter Burnside came around to score in the second and third innings respectively, while Barwick was able to hold off the Leafs until the seventh and final inning in a 2-1 win.

Barwick's league-leading seventh win of the year was his best effort so far this season, pitching a complete game and allowing just four hits while striking out seven batters.

Despite the low score, the Brewers still managed 10 hits off of Uylenbroek.

An 8-3 win over their fellow Bolton squad, the Dodgers, Monday guaranteed a season series sweep and has the Brewers just two points back of the league-leading New Lowell Knights.

The Dodgers were fresh off a pair of losses to the Midland Indians in a doubleheader Saturday, and are officially eliminated from post-season contention.

The most crucial match of the year for the Brewers comes in this weekend's final regular season series, a doubleheader on the road against the Knights that will almost certainly determine the league's regular season champions.

The Dodgers wrap up Friday night in a meeting with the Newmarket Cornhuskers.

Playoffs are set to begin in early August with a best-of-five quarter-final, followed by a best-of-five semifinal, and a best-of-seven championship series scheduled for early September.

For stats, schedules, and more information, visit www.ndbl.ca.

Ivy's Jeremy Fernandez is thrown out at first in the Bolton Brewers' 2-1 win over the Leafs at Victoria Park Sunday.
